

Phlebotomy Technician

Course Overview

This 64-hour program consists of 48 hours of classroom instruction and a 16-hour externship, which will provide hands-on experience in a real-world medical setting, completed during the program. Students should be prepared to attend the externship. The externship may be waived if the student has a job as a phlebotomist and already has 16 hours of practical experience, verified by a signed letter from their employer. This program trains students to collect and prepare blood samples from adults, infants, and children for medical and clinical testing. These tests are used to help verify overall health and diagnose medical conditions. Phlebotomy Technicians find employment in hospitals, medical and diagnostic laboratories, medical clinics, and blood donor centers.

Note: Externships are highly recommended. If a student does not complete the required 16 hours of externship or provide a signed letter from their employer verifying 16 hours of clinical experience, the externship will be waived. In such cases, the certificate of training will indicate 48 hours of classroom instruction with no externship hours completed.
